

---

Dr. Tuncay Saritaş is working at the department of Computer Education and Instructional Technology, Faculty of Education, Balıkesir University. He is also the Director of Distance Education Application and Research Center. He holds a Master's degree Instructional Systems Technology from Indiana University, and a doctorate degree in Instructional Technology from Iowa State University. He has been actively working as an expert and evaluator of European Union Projects (Centralized Projects) and The Scientific and Technological Research Council of Turkey. He is also a certified expert trainer for “training the trainers” about Project Cycle Management (PCM). His research includes ICT-enriched applications, and learning/training strategies, adult education, quality improvement and management in different training contexts, and creative strategies for professional development. He also lectures research methodology courses at a master's and doctoral level: Qualitative and Quantitative Research & Analysis Techniques with the use of computer software.

---

Dr. Ebru Ersari received her MA and PhD degrees in Mathematics Education from the University of Georgia in the USA. She is currently working in Mathematics Department at Kafkas University in Turkey. Her research interests are teacher education, mathematical knowledge for teaching, and professional noticing.

---

Dr. Caner Börekci is working at the Research Center for Distance Learning, Balıkesir University. He hold a Master's degree Computer Education and Instructional Technology and a doctorate degree in Curriculum and Instruction from Balıkesir University. His research includes project based learning, self regulated learning, machine learning and educational data mining. He lectures project based learning at undergraduate level.

---